WARNING OVER ISLAM

"BRITAIN IS only a generation away from being a Moslem country".

That is the claim of the Rev. Ian Gregory of Newcastle-under-Lyme. He believes that Islam, a faith with more than two million followers in Britain, was daily becoming more influential and would soon be Britain's main religion.

BACKED

A Bible Society survey backed his claim showing that only 2.5% of Britons regularly read the Bible while Moslems read from the Koran and pray five times every day.

FRONT PLEDGE ON HOMES FOR EX-SERVICEMEN

• Britain's soldiers face a grim future when they leave the service.

BRITAIN'S SERVICEMEN are facing a grim future when they return to civilian life.

Spiralling house prices have meant that many have missed the boat in buying into the property market and are facing a long wait on council housing lists. Even soldiers with a pension after up to 22 years service are having difficulties.

The Soldiers, Sailors and Airmen's Family Association has confirmed that thousands of desperate ex-servicemen are struggling to find homes. Spokesman Chris Hogg said, "There is a harrowing crisis, Many men are in dire straits.

"They were on such low pay that they are coming back into civilian life stone cold".

The fact that loyal British servicemen are being plunged into a miserable life of homelessness is a scandal. It is treasonable that people who have risked their lives serving their country are being put on waiting lists behind immigrants from the Thirld World who have done nothing for Britain or the British people.

The National Front would guarantee council homes for the men and their families leaving the services.

Paying the Price of Patriotism

COLOURED IMMIGRANTS in Manchester are forcing the city council to wage a war on a patriotic taxi driver in the city.

John Howard has his Cortina plastered with Union Jacks and St George's flags, but now he has been given the ultimatum - remove the stickers or have your taxi licence revoked.

Asians in Manchester have complained to the local council that the flags on the taxi offend them. John Howard summed up the council's action as "victimisation for being patriotic".

• Patriot John Howard.

LEGACY OF THE THATCHER YEARS

IN THE House of Commons last month Mrs Thatcher admitted that coloured immigrants were coming into Britain at the steady rate of 50,000 a year.

That's a cool 500,000 since Mrs Thatcher came to power, elected by a public duped by her famous "I can understand the British people fears of being swamped" speech.

The frightening effects of coloured immigration on Britain is a nettle that must be grasped sooner or later if the identity of the British people is to survive.

The National Front is the only political party with the courage to take up that challenge.

• Looney Hindley

LABOUR LOONEY - 1

MIKE HINDLEY, Euro MP for Lancashire East has called for Hong Kong's 3.5 million Chinese residents to be allowed to settle in Britain.

LABOUR LOONEY - 2

JACK STRAW, Labour's Education spokesman wants Asian children to be taught in their mother tongue in Britain's schools. He also wants ethnic minority parents to become school governors together with more Black and Asian teachers.

Food Poisoning: Typical Government Response!

THE NUMBER of reported food poisoning cases in England and Wales is 48% higher so far this year than in 1988. In the 22 weeks to June 2nd there were 16,844 food-poisoning cases reported by local health authorities.

The release of the figures brought a swift response from the Government who decided to close the Institute of Food Research at Langford, Bristol, where botulism and other food-related diseases are investigated.

The closure will mean the sack for the 115 scientists working at the Institute.

• Pollution: Britain is responsible.

• Britain's trees under threat.

ATTACKING THE HEART OF BRITAIN'S COUNTRYSIDE

BRITAIN'S OAK trees are being murdered by pollution. That was the finding of a United Nations survey into the effects of pollution on trees in 25 European nations published last month.

63% of British oaks are dying because of the filth this Government allows to be spewed into the air, and those mature trees over sixty years old, the heart of Britain's countryside, are the worst affected.

This devastation of our oaks is the worst in Europe. The second worst, the Dutch, had 46% of their oaks afflicted by pollution. When all species of trees are considered, Britain came only second to Czechoslovakia, whose Communist rulers are notorious for their contempt for the environment.

Amongst conifers, Britain's trees were better off only than those of Poland and amongst broadleaved trees, Holland and Czechoslovakia came neck and neck in the race to choke their forests followed by Greece and then Britain.

The National Front condemns the relentless pollution of our countryside for short-term benefits and believes that we can best protect our environment by research, development and implementation of renewable energy sources, such as wind, wave and hydro-electric power.

TORY BONUS FOR VIOLENT CRIME

SCOTLAND YARD is going to have its budget slashed by £20 million next year as the Government implements cut-backs to prop up Britain's ailing economy.

From the Party that claims to be the defenders of law and order in Britain, the cutbacks are a slap in the eye for Britain's police and public alike.

Tunnel Claims Another Victim

THE LATEST victim of the Channel Tunnel is a rare British lizard.

One of the last remaining colonies of the viviparous lizard, Lacerta Vivipara, is being bulldozed away in a derelict railway siding near Wormwood Scrubs to make way for the Channel Tunnel link.

MURDERED

The Wildlife and Countryside Act proved helpless in the battle to save the lizard. British lives, British wildlife and the British environment is being murdered by the Channel Tunnel. It is the ultimate in Common Market madness!

ASIANS ADD TO POLICING PROBLEM

AN ASIAN march through East London last month ended in violence with 35 arrests and five policemen injured.

The march was in protest against alleged inadequate policing of the Bangladeshi community in the area.

HOSPITAL

A police spokesman told Asian leaders that Police presence in their area could not now be increased because five of his men were now in hospital because of the demonstration!

Tunnel Kills Off Hovercraft

THE PASSENGER-carrying hovercraft was invented in Britain 30 years ago this summer, but the next generation of these highly useful vehicles will be manufactured abroad because the Government refuses to cough up the £20 million necessary for further development.

Hovercraft inventor, Sir Christopher Cockerell, condemned the lack of Government support citing Mrs Thatcher's fascination with the Channel Tunnel as the reason why a British invention was going 'foreign' and British brainpower and expertise was being wasted.

Grim Reality of 'Sid' Sell-off

THE SELL off of British Gas has proved a disaster.

Since privatisation, 7,500 jobs have been lost in the industry, gas showrooms have closed down and there has been a failure to achieve the promised wider range of services for the customer.

But the biggest failure in the Government's exercise in popular capitalism has been their claim that the workforce would have a real say in the industry. The grim reality of Sid's sell-off is that the 82,000 workers hold less than 0.7% of the total shares.

On Friday 24th June the National Front Executive Council held a strategy conference to outline plans for the party for the next few years. NF Chairman Ian Anderson reports on the findings of the conference.

THE NEXT FIVE YEARS

NF Chairman, Ian Anderson outlining future strategy.

THE NATIONAL Front has made great strides over the last year or so and is now in its strongest position for several years. However it must be admitted that we still have an awfully long way to go before we even start to be able to put our ideas into practice.

Our medium term aim is to build a political movement capable of mounting a serious challenge to the old parties. This means that we must then be able to mount major local and national campaigns on a whole range of issues. These campaigns will be aimed at gaining widespread support for our ideas and for the National Front as an organisation.

To do this and to hold other political activities we require an organisations infrastructure including regional offices, a main head office, a full time staff, a complete printing operation, plus, of course, a much larger membership. The task facing the National Front is to grow from our present level to a level at which all this is possible. To do this we must advance one sure step after another. Each step must enable us to take the next step along the pathway which eventually leads us to achieving power in this country.

At the same time we must make sure that advances are kept in balance with one another, for example there is no point in having a large, fully staffed head office unless there are sufficient strong branches to warrant it; conversely it would be foolish and anarchistic to have a large number of strong branches without a central co-ordinating body. The key to our advance is to keep each area in phase with all the other areas of our activities.

One of the main problems facing the National Front is our widely dispersed membership and support. This problem is faced by all small parties, the Liberals/SDP have often received 20-30% of the total vote in the U.K. but they rarely exceed 10-15 M.P.'s - barely 2% of the total. The same applies at local level. If the National Front could concentrate all our members and supporters in one area then we could probably gain control of a small city council.

We obviously cannot ask our supporters to move their homes, however we can seek to build up concentrated areas of support rather than simply a degree of support right across the country. As a first step we are now asking our largest branches to adopt local election wards as particular 'target' areas in which to concentrate our resources such as the distribution of leaflets, the door-to-door sales of papers, etc. It is thus intended that these will also be the wards which we contest in future local elections.

ENCOURAGING

At a slightly higher level it is our intention to contest concentrated blocks of constituencies at the next General Election rather than spreading our effort across the country. In order to allow regions to start to implement these plans we will moderate the level of our national activities but will be encouraging regional activities such as local picket demonstrations, days of action, etc.

At national level the party is currently stretched close to our limit in terms of how much organisation, activities, etc. we can accommodate. To alleviate this we are intending to take on additional staff in September this year. This will allow us to offer a wider and more comprehensive range of services to our branches and our members. It will also allow us to initiate a wider range of promotional activities.

We anticipate that the expansion in the activities of the central administration will also require a proper office within the next 8 months and plans for the acquisition of such a head office are now well advanced.

One problem which the National Front really must tackle if we are serious in our quest for growth and for power is the matter of our public image. This is not simply a matter of ensuring that we avoid the more obvious pitfalls and that we keep out certain undesirables, it is also a matter of making sure that we are seen to be offering an attractive and viable alternative.

This is not always an easy task; while it may be relatively simple to gain publicity for our opposition to the I.R.A., it is far less simple to gain publicity for our solution to the problems of Northern Ireland. The same is true of a number of other issues such as Race, the Environment, Defence, etc. No matter how difficult is this task it is going to be tackled. There are ways in which we can promote our views and get people to listen to us. This needs a lot of hard work from all our members and it needs the self discipline of every member to ensure that people treat us and our views seriously and worthy of consideration.

The final problem which always dogged the National Front is the problem of cash. Over the last two years we have built up a movement in which all the constituent elements are completely self-supporting. The Flag, Vanguard, etc. are all completely financially independent. Head Office survives on its share of the membership subscriptions and donations plus a small income from the sales of publicity material.

PILOT SCHEMES

If we are to maintain and improve the financial health of the central administration then we must dramatically expand the volume and range of publicity materials available. We must also fully examine new ways of increasing our financial income without continually have to keep going to our members for donations. We have two major commercial enterprises under examination and over the next few months will be running pilot schemes to test their viability. For obvious reasons we are not giving out the exact details of these schemes until we are ready to carry them out on a much wider scale.

In summary the strategy conference agreed that the National Front has been heading in the right direction, that we have made recent advances and that there is absolutely no reason why we should not continue to do so.

Steady Stream of New Members During June/July

JULY WAS an excellent month for the National Front. At a time of the year when political activity and interest is low because of the holiday season the National Front has been signing up new members at the rate of 20 a week.

Tina Wingfield, NF Administration Officer said the continual stream of new recuits, was providing a welcome source of income for the party during the lean summer months. "The new members are coming from all areas, and not just Birmingham as a result of our Euro-Election effort." she told The FLAG, "The income is helping us meet outstanding bills from the elections we fought in June".

DOWN AT THE SEASIDE

NATIONAL FRONT members from Eastbourne and Brighton held a papersale in Eastbourne on Saturday July 22nd.

Each month Sussex members hold papersales in the town as well as selling in Worthing

Charges Dropped Against NF Members

CHARGES OF unlawful assembly against 19 National Front members and supporters, who were arrested after a demonstration against a Moslem march through the West Midlands town of Lye, have been dropped.

BANK BACKS FRONT!

THE TORIES get millions from banks and big business. Labour gets millions from the Trade Unions. The Liberals get quite a lot from - I don't know - gay millionaires, perhaps.

Big business gets plenty in return from the Tories. The unions are smiled upon by Labour. What gay millionaires get from the Liberals doesn't bear thinking about.

He's got the Abbey Habit; Brighton NF Organiser, Ian Taylor.

Till now, no big business has backed the National Front. Now Britain's newest bank, Abbey National PLC, has rectified that grievous omission. At least one branch of the NF had the good sense to have an account with Abbey National and qualify for a hand-out of 100 free shares, worth about £150 at present.

When one considers that the NF proposes the strictest controls on banks, up to and including nationalisation, Abbey National's donation to the NF is an instance of selfless patriotism that is an example to us all.

When our day comes, Abbey National, the NF may smile on you. Come to think of it, we're smiling now.

A Papersale by Luton NF.

NEW NF BRANCH IN LUTON

A NEW National Front branch has got off the ground in Luton.

Local branch secretary, Claire Gale has been busy organising the administration side with recruitment and a Post Office box the main priorities.

Home Counties North Regional Organiser, John McAuley has helped Luton produce their own poster and is giving general advice to the committee.

Wasting no time a local door-to-door round has already been started selling NF publications.

Ovation

THE COLLECTION at Birmingham's July branch meeting was £140.00, reports local treasurer, Norman Tomkinson. Literature sales were £52.00.

More than 40 local members gave guest speaker Steve Brady a standing ovation after a hard-hitting speech on the effects of coloured immigration on Britain.

Chatham Hope

NEW NATIONAL Front members in Chatham in Kent have put out nearly 4,000 NF leaflets in their area during July. Kent Regional Organiser, Geoff Burnett, is hopeful that the setting up of a fully constituted branch in the town is not far off.

New P.O. Box

WALSALL NATIONAL Front now have their own postal address. They can be contacted by writing to The Secretary, P.O.Box 70, Walsall, West Midlands WS1 2FU.

On the Spot

£57.00 WAS taken in a recent Saturday morning papersale in Hemel Hempstead. The total included membership subscriptions from two members of the public who joined up on the spot as well as sales of T-shirts and the NF Introduction Brochure.

Exeter Record

THE EXETER Branch meeting on Sunday 9th July raised a record collection for the branch of £123.00. NF activists in the town have been holding regular papersales at the local speedway and greyhound meetings during the summer months

Still Active

FORMER NATIONAL Front Directorate member and long serving party activist, Peter Williams, was the guest speaker at Great Yarmouth's branch meeting on July 19th.

Grimsby NF

THE FIRST National Front meeting for many years was held in Grimsby on Wednesday 21st June. While the meeting was small with 12 local members in attendence, the group have plans for expansion and will be working closely with the Hull Branch of the National Front.

Back on Tyne

NATIONAL FRONT leafletting teams were busy in the North-East during July with the mining town of Horden and Peterlee, Co. Durham covered along with an area of Middlesborough.

It is also encouraging to report that Newcastle NF have ordered papers and leaflets for a recruitment drive

NF LEAGUE TABLES

CONGRATULATIONS TO Croydon National Front who top this month's Branch Efficiency League by means of their extensive leafletting activity. Birmingham take second place on the strength of their weekly door-to-door sales, while Great Yarmouth are well clear in third place of their nearest rivals. The National Front's most efficient branch will be awarded the Branch Efficiency Cup at the NF Annual Conference on Sunday 24th September in Birmingham.

• Combatting Aids in Cuba

KEEPING CLEAR OF THE AIDS CARRIERS

WHILE AIDS in Britain continues to spread and all the Government can do is waste money on a pathetic media campaign, there's one country that has taken real steps to deal with the problem.

Cuba is in the process of testing its entire population for AIDS and are putting into quarantine anyone who is found to have the deadly virus.

TWO-FOLD

Dr Héctor Terry, Cuba's vice Minister of Health says that the purpose of the policy is two-fold, "One is to treat the patient and the other is to avoid the possibility of the patient spreading the virus by maintaining promiscuous relationships".

And the Cuban AIDS policy is working. The percentage of those who tested positive for the HIV virus was 0.005% in 1988, down from 0.008% in 1987 and 0.016% in 1986. Without the policy Dr Terry believes there would be 6,000 AIDS cases in Cuba today.

The National Front backs the Cuban policy. The health and welfare of our people must be protected and if that means that means putting into quarantine homosexuals and drug addicts carrying the virus then so be it.

ENTERING BRITAIN WITHOUT CHECKS

THE INTERNATIONAL Civil Airports Association has called for a dramatic reduction in immigration controls after 1992. At present everyone coming into Britain has to pass through immigration control, the Association wants this eliminated for everyone who comes from a Common Market country.

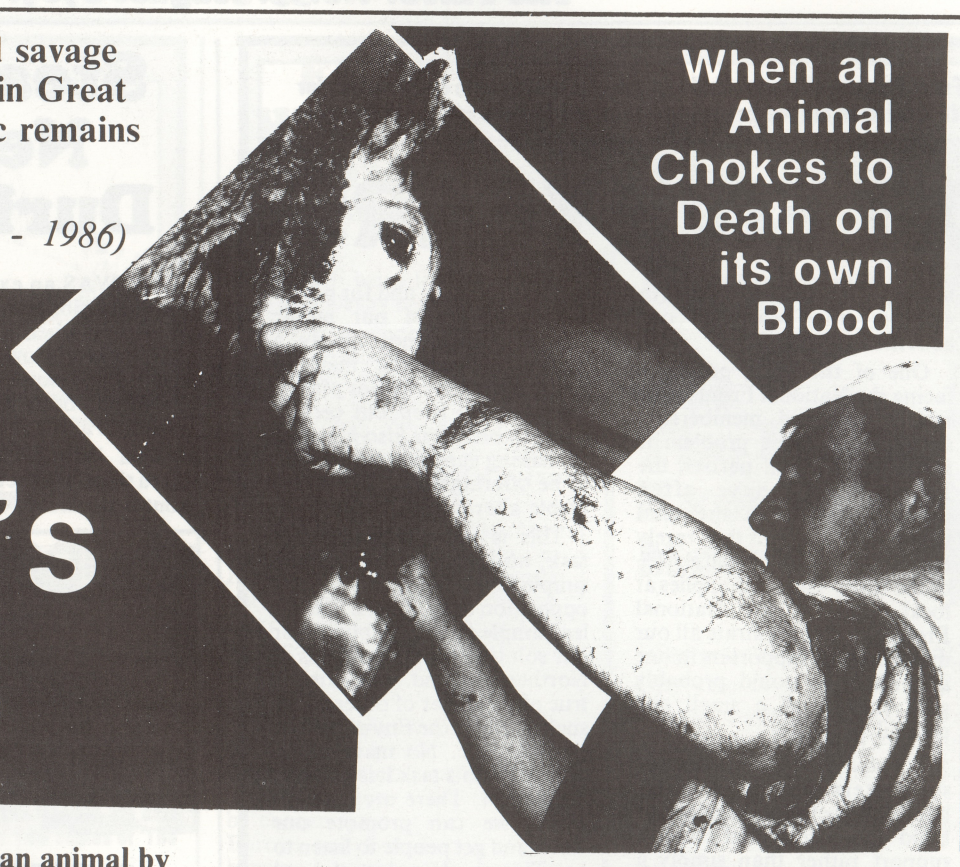
This means that an Asian flying from Delhi to London via Rome will go through Italian immigration control but will then be able to freely enter Britain without any form of checks.

The end result is that we will have to rely on the weakest immigration controls in Europe to keep out unwanted immigrants. In reality this means that controls will rapidly cease to exist, especially when Turkey joins the EEC. It also means that terrorists and drug traffickers will effectively have free movement across Europe.

"Ritual slaughter is a cruel and savage custom which will remain legal in Great Britain only so long as the public remains silent".

(Compassion in World Farming - 1986)

A Nation's Shame



RITUAL SLAUGHTER is the killing of an animal by bleeding it to death after cutting through the main carotid artery and jugular vein whilst the animal is forcibly restrained and fully conscious. The animal dies in great stress, fear and pain conscious of choking to death on it's own blood within 3 to 7 minutes after the initial cut has been made.

If the cut has not been administered correctly, which is often the case in Muslim abattoirs, the animal takes considerably longer to die. This method of slaughter is banned in Sweden, Switzerland and Norway, but in Britain millions of animals die every year by ritual slaughter to satisfy the ever increasing demand for Halal Meat from our rapidly mushrooming Muslim population.

It is required under British slaughterhouse legislation that food animals shall either be killed instantaneously or be stunned by an approved method so that the animal is rendered insensible to pain until death supervenes.

STUNNING

This legislation is designed to prevent cruelty and suffering to animals in abattoirs and has been developed progressively in this country since 1875. In January 1904, an Admiralty Committee made recommendations on the most humane and practicable method of killing animals for food and said that the Jewish method of ritual slaughter should not be allowed until some method of stunning could be agreed. Because of pressure by orthodox Jews living in our society the Government of the day submitted and agreed that Jewish ritual slaughter could continue on religious grounds.

In 1933 this law was extended to include Muslim seamen calling at British ports in order for them to have fresh meat. However, because of mass Muslim immigration into our country since the 1950's, the like of which was undreamt of in 1933, what we are now seeing is a level of ritual slaughter which has reached unprecedented proportions.

Professor John Webster, Britain's leading cattle expert points out "what is totally unacceptable is the distressing fact that for a cow, she is choking to death on her own blood". This fact of course applies to all animals entering Jewish and Muslim abattoirs.

In the Muslim's Halal slaughter the knife is often blunt, with most slaughtermen untrained and unskilled. Indeed, many Muslims perform ritual slaughter in their own homes and backyards cutting the throats of animals they have purchased alive and allowing them to slowly bleed to death.

Both the Government's own advisory body, the Farm Animal Welfare Council and the British Veterinary Association have recommended that all animals and poultry MUST be humanely stunned before being bled to death. The Slaughterhouses Act 1974 requires that this should be done but allows two exemptions - for Jews and for Muslims.

Recently there have been takeovers in the slaughterhouse industry by Halal Meat Packers which is now the biggest sheep meat processor in Europe. The first, Ulster Meats Plant in Lurgan which was set up in 1984 by Purcells with major Government funding. Purcells has been forced out of the meat export trade and is now to concentrate on the export of live animals for slaughtering in overseas abattoirs.

The second casualty is the giant Craven Arms Export Abattoir in Shropshire, part of Welsh Quality Lambs which was a co-operative venture owned by sheep farmer/share-holders. Mr. Oriel Jones, President of the Fresh Meat Wholesalers reported "there is a massive over-capacity in the slaughtering industry here in the U.K. which has been aggravated by the arrival of large new slaughterers such as Halal Meat Packers which can cope with enormous throughputs. They inevitably took trade away from other abattoirs". Farmers Weekly of the 29th of August '86 also put competition for stock as one of the main reasons for the downfall of the Craven Arms Export Abattoir.

The Craven Arms crash started in August 1986 when debts reached £1 million and throughput declined to half the previous levels. 400 anxious sheep farmers from 13 buying groups met and attempted to raise pledges for £500,000. When this attempt failed, a month later the Receiver took over the whole of Welsh Quality Lambs PLC and put it up for sale.

On the 10th of October it was announced that Halal Meat Packers had bought the Craven Arms abattoir and the Birmingham-based Halal Meat Company the Henllan abattoir.

Halal Meat Packers now kill 60,000 sheep every week in the United Kingdom.

The abomination of ritual slaughter continues in growth unabated despite the growing disgust and opposition from the indigenous population. How much longer are we going to tolerate the suffering created by the ever increasing demand for ritually slaughtered meat from ethnic minorities living in our country?

There is now a growing trend amongst the Muslim population of performing ritual slaughter in their own homes in the densely-populated areas of our inner cities and towns. In backyards throughout our country, where in the past nothing more sinister occurred than keeping pigeons or growing cabbages, it is common now to hear the cries of animals as they await slaughter. That this state of affairs should exist in Britain in 1989 is an insult to the culture and civilisation of the British people.

The National Front has a duty to campaign for a total ban on ritual slaughter. The Government must be made to act on the wishes of the British people and end this evil and alien practice.

British Fishing Fleets Fleeced by Foreigners

THE LUNACY of registering boats in different countries has finally erupted into total chaos. In order to 'steal' Britain's fishing quota Spanish fishing boats have been nominally registered in Britain and are therefore allowed to fish Britain's waters.

The obvious solution is to prevent foreign-owned or manned ships from flying the Union Jack as a British registered vessel - but this would upset the multinational corporations which register their vessels in Panama, Liberia or any other country which has few safety regulations or trade union organisations.

So it looks as though ordinary British fishermen will lose out again because of the power of the giant multinationals.

British is Best

A REVOLUTIONARY British-built wheelchair has gone into production at a small factory in Birmingham.

The Squirrel Wheelchair can travel 12 miles on a single charge and has four independently controlled wheels. A state-of-the-art microprocessor system enables the user to adjust the responsiveness of the controls, so those suffering from hand tremors have as much control as those without.

The Squirrel costs £1,600.

• Off-loading the oil cargo from a damaged tanker.

Oil Spills Threaten the Environment

IT WILL be a generation or more before all the oil spilled from the tanker Exxon Valdez will be cleared from the rocks of the Alaskan coastline. The residue of the spillage is clearly visible up to 470 miles away from Prince William Sound where the world's largest oil pollution took place.

You would have thought that the disaster would have alerted oil companies to the need to tighten up safety procedures but that's not the case as another two oil spillages took place on the coast of the United States in one-weekend at the beginning of July.

More than 1 million gallons of diesel leaked from the Greek Tanker World Prodigy forming a 20 square mile oil slick polluting the beaches of Rhode Island, while 1.6 million gallons of heavy fuel oil, so thick that it must be warmed to be pumped, leaked when the Uruguayan tanker President Rivera ran aground in the Delaware river south of Philadelphia.

Oil Companies must face the stiffest penalties when pollution takes place. Hitting them in their pockets is the only way to get them to tighten up oil transportation safety.

Another Forgotten British Hero

JACKIE MANN was a Battle of Britain pilot. Shot down six times, "the last time", as his wife put it, "he lost most of his face and had to have it remodelled by plastic surgery", his gallantry in the service of our country won him the Distinguished Service Medal.

Today this war hero rots forgotten in the war-torn hell of West Beirut, unable to afford to live in his own country because Thatcher's Government won't pay him and his equally British wife a pension.

KIDNAPPING

In May, the inevitable happened, Islamic terrorists struck another brave blow at Britain by kidnapping this 75-year-old Englishman. His whereabouts and welfare at the moment are unknown.

This British hero was dumped in hell, unable to afford to live in his own country, because after his distinguished war service he worked as chief pilot for MEA, the Lebanese airline, and thus fell foul of bureaucratic Department of Social Security residence regulations. For all the DSS care, however bravely Jackie Mann D.S.M. fought for his country once, he can starve to death now. Or stay in Beirut, where at least the Lebanese airline pays him a pension.

• The wife of kidnapped Jackie Mann awaits news.

Nor is this valiant pilot the only elderly Briton condemned to live, and probably die, in the Beirut battle-zone by Tory and Labour meanness. Bridget Todd, for example, has lived in Beirut for 34 years, working for British firms and interests, including 15 years with the British Embassy. She won't get a British pension either. "I wrote to Mrs Thatcher saying I wanted to leave but had nowhere to go and not much money", she said. "Her secretary wrote back saying they might be able to find me a temporary house in a few months time and referred me to one of the ministries". Meanwhile this brave old lady, after a life-time working for Britain in one of the world's most dangerous trouble-spots, is forced to go on dodging the artillery bombardments in the rubble of a ruined foreign city, unable to afford to come home.

BETTER OFF?

It is a scandal that while veteran of the "Few" Jackie Mann lies chained in a terrorist dungeon, and British old ladies like his wife and Mrs Todd are denied the British pension that would enable them to come home from hell, elderly Pakistanis and West Indians who have never lifted a hand to help our country step straight off the plane and into the Post Office, brandishing their nice new Pension Books.

But perhaps the forgotten British old folk are better off not coming home after all. For they wouldn't recognise what used to be their country any more . . .

THE TORIES ARE MURDERING BRITISH INDUSTRY

● From a Jew to a Jap: Lord Young hands over the British Car Industry.

● Shipbuilding on Wearside is now lost forever.

Sold Into Servitude

TWO MORE DEADLY blows were struck against British industry in July. On the same day, it was announced that the last British owned carmaker, Rover, was to surrender a substantial slice of its shares to Japanese giant Honda and to help the Japs build a bridgehead in Swindon for further invasion of our car market. And that the last shipyards in Sunderland were to close for ever.

The Honda deal will enable the Japs to use Rover as a "Trojan horse" to flood this country with 100,000 "British made" Japanese cars a year by 1994. The Japs get 20% of Rover in the deal, in a swap in which the British firm gets 20% not of Honda itself (perish the thought of "round-eye barbarians" ever owning a slice of sacred Nipponese industry!) but only of their new assembly plant in Swindon.

Already fears are widespread that Honda's 20% is only the first bite of the cherry, and that sooner or later Rover will end up run from Tokyo. When that happens, the British motor industry, once the World's greatest, will have fallen almost wholly into foreign hands. Already the non-import industry here is dominated by the US multinationals Ford and General Motors, the French Peugot-Talbot, the Dutch DAF and the Japs Nissan. Fellow Japs Toyota recently announced plans to build an £850 million car plant in Derbyshire and an engine factory on Deeside. Meanwhile almost half the cars on British roads are imported, foreign-built as well as foreign-owned.

British Industry was built up by generations of British Workers to whom every factory and shipyard rightfully belongs.

LICKING THEIR LIPS

At the top end of the market, Aston-Martin Lagonda fell into American hands in 1984, only to be sold to fellow Yanks Ford. And it has just been revealed that the Government have yielded to Common Market pressure and are to remove the safeguards which currently limit foreign shareholdings in Rolls-Royce and British Aerospace, which currently owns the non-Japanese bit of Rover, to 15%. Japs and Yanks are licking their lips greedily already.

Thatcher defends the selling off of British industry on the grounds that "it will create jobs". The Honda sellout will, it is true, create 1,300 new jobs in Swindon, Wilts. But nobody needs jobs in Swindon. Unemployment, at 3.5% is among the lowest in Britain, and in fact there is a shortage of skilled labour for the new plant (perhaps Thatcher will bring in some Hong Kong Chinese to work for their co-racialists there!)

LOST FOREVER

It is widely feared that the flood of Honda cars from Swindon, together with the sellout to Japan, threatens the future of Rover plants at Longbridge, Birmingham, and Cowley, Oxford, thereby losing vastly more jobs than the Swindon deal created.

Meanwhile on Wearside, where unemployment is amongst the highest in Britain, 3,000 more jobs are now lost forever because the long-established local yards, the heart of a community with a proud patriotic tradition, are to close for good. Tory Trade Minister Newton told the Commons on July 13th that the Government had ordered the yard's owners, British Shipbuilders, to sell off their assets "for purposes other than shipbuilding". He admitted that Common Market interference had sabotaged two separate deals which would have kept shipbuilding alive on Wearside.

LIFELINE

The Brussels bureaucrats vetoed the deals which would have saved British jobs for British workers in British shipyards. But they have done nothing to stop the Japanese invasion of the British economy. Perhaps the Wearsiders, who once forged in steel the lifeline of an Empire that dominated the Earth, will scrape a future as serfs assembling TV sets for the new slant-eyed overlords of the World's economy, sold into servitude by a "British" Government which cons the voters by wrapping itself in the Union Flag.

British industry was not built up by Thatcher, or the Tory toffs who lived off the sweat of its brow for decades. It was built up by generations of British workers, to whom every factory and every shipyard rightfully belongs. Those workers deserve a better future than slaving for Asiatics. They deserve to own the industry they built. Only the National Front will give them that ownership and that future, British jobs for British workers in British factories.

SELLING OFF THE FAMILY SILVER

THE HONDA-ROVER sellout is only the latest and most widely noticed of the shoddy deals whereby the Tories are selling off British firms to foreigners.

In the same month as the Honda sellout, it was announced that one of Britain's oldest gunmakers, Holland and Holland, a byword for craftsmanship, is to be sold to French perfume firm Chanel.

SWALLOWED

Another British institution, HP Sauce, was sold off to the French BSN last year. Rowntree of York, once one of the top 200 independent British companies with 11,000 British employees, was sold to the Swiss giant Nestle. The makers of Fruit Gums, Kit-Kat and Yorkie Bars make up just 3% of the worldwide multinational empire which has swallowed them up. Now fellow Swiss Suchards are closing in on Cadbury-Schweppes.

Wedgwood, for 200 years world leaders in quality table china, has been sold off to the Irish Republican firm Waterford Glass. Earlier this year Cornhill Insurance, sponsors of English Test cricket, were sold out to the German giant Allianz. Harrods, the World's top department store, is now in the hands of the Islamic Egyptian Al-Fayed clan.

The sell-out of British industry to foreigners with Tory Government connivance has become such an avalanche that even a few old-school Tories are appalled. Before his death, former Tory Prime Minister Harold Macmillan warned his successor Thatcher against whan he called "selling off the family silver". But the new generation of Tories, who don't even have the vast landholdings of their aristocratic predecessors to bind them to the soil of our land, only care about money. And if it's foreign money, so what?

TRAITORS

Before ever they sold our industry, Thatcher's Tories sold their souls for foreign gold. It is time the British public woke up to this, and realised that Thatcherite "patriotism" is a sham, a lie and a media mirage. The Tories are traitors in the pocket of foreign multinationals.

Only the National Front now stands up for Britain and the British people.

The Reality of 1992

ALAN SUGAR SAYS it will be wonderful because he can sell his (Japanese-imported) computers all across Europe; Richard Branson is overjoyed because he can sell his condoms to the Italians and the Greeks; the politicians are looking forward to it because it gives them another stage on which to strut. Everyone on television and in the newspapers seems determined to convince us that 1992 will be the best thing since England won the World Cup.

The reality is quite different, the changes that take place in 1992 will effectively mean that the light of democracy in Europe will be snuffed out as we move headlong into a new dark age.

FLOOD INTO BRITAIN

So what are the main changes which are taking place? In 1992 all tariff barriers come down, goods, services and people can move from one country to another without any type of restriction or import duty. Italian goods can flood into Britain, Turkish goods will soon be able to flood Germany.

The giant multinational companies will see their profits soar as they are able to concentrate their production in whichever country has the cheapest labour. Many moves are already being made in this direction. The Common Market is introducing standardised regulations for cars covering everything from tyre tread to headlamp brilliance. Once the regulations are standardised then cars made in one country can be moved to any other country without checks.

But perhaps the most immoral part of the changes in 1992 is the switch in power from democratically elected governments to unelected business managers. In future whole factories can be moved from one country to another irrespective of the wishes of the nations involved. If a nation doesn't adopt the policies required by the multinational companies, then they will withdraw their investments, close down their factories and switch production to a more accommodating country.

Thus whole regions could be desolated at the whim of the controllers of big business - yet these people are answerable, not to the people, but to their shareholders - mainly investment houses, insurance companies and banks, who are solely interested in the level of profit they can extract. If a company can make more profit by shutting down their factory in Britain and opening a new one in Southern Italy or Turkey then that is what they will have to do to keep their financial bosses happy. They are not in any way accountable to the people who are affected by their decisions, they never submit to election by the people. They simply rise to their positions by proving that they can extract more profit than the next man.

PROMOTED BY GREED

1992 and all that it entails is a monstrous and totally immoral act promoted by greed and carried into existence by politicans who have become servants of international business, rather than ensuring that economic enterprises serve the needs of the people.

1992 is a potential disaster yet it may prove to be the most extreme and perhaps the final act of an economic system that has become rotten from the centre outwards. History has taught us that many trends proceed, often over a period of decades, until finally they go too far and then a sudden and violent revolution sets in and destroys the system.

1992 may prove to be the start of a change as dramatic as 1789 or 1917. The task of the National Front is to be the light which guides our nation to a new future where the people control their own economic destiny.

Bank Upsets Race Board

A BANK note produced by the Clydesdale Bank of Scotland is under attack by the Race Relations Board.

The banknote which shows blacks in chains was first produced in 1982. The images are connected with David Livingstone, who is featured on the other side of the note, and his missionary involvement.

Strathclyde Community Relations Council said it was horrendous and amazing that a national bank could use such an image of black people.

NF TRIP TO ULSTER

by Mark Cotterill

IT HAD been 5 years since I last travelled over to Ulster. Then it was to Coleraine, when the NF held a highly successful march and rally there in 1984. Since then of course there has been the Anglo-Irish Agreement, which threatens to throw loyal Ulster out of the UK. Many thoughts went through my mind, as to how things may have changed since my first trip, as I started the long journey to Stanraer with my NF collegues.

We arrived at Stanraer at 2.30am half an hour before our Ferry was due to leave. At the boarding gate we were stopped and questioned by Special Branch, and all had to fill in cards, asking a number of questions as to why we were visiting Ulster. What struck us as odd was that, it's a damned site easier to get into say France or Holland, than it is to get to Ulster, and it's part of the UK!

FLUTTERING

As daylight broke the ferry arrived at the port of Larne, we were tired and the worse for wear, from the long journey from Devon the day before. Four out of the five of us made it past Special Branch without being stopped, and then we boarded the Belfast train at about 6.15am.

We were soon speeding through the beautiful Ulster countryside, stopping at a number of quaint local Railway Stations. What stood out was the many Union jack and Ulster flags fluttering proudly in the wind on roofs of houses, a sight rarely seen on mainland Britain. Just before 7am we reached our stop, Carrickfergus, we were the only passengers to get off.

• Young Loyalists enjoying the 12th

On the evening of July 11th we made our way to one of the many Bonfires, which are lit to welcome in the start of the 12th. Even the drizzle that started could not dampen our enthusiasm. Everywhere there was Red, White and Blue.

Next morning, was the Day, July 12th, and the erstwhile English revellers had to drag themselves out of bed after only a few hours sleep. After a quick breakfast it was down to the local Railway station, passing the still smouldering piles of ashes, from the night befores bonfires. We were late so our train was only half full of local Loyalists making their way to Belfast. After only 10 minutes and 3 stops we were at Belfast's York Street Station, we were here, this was where it was going to happen. No one spoke much, we just followed the crowds towards the City centre and the sounds of the Drum and Pipe bands.

On reaching the City centre we quickly organised ourselves for the selling of 'The Flag'. We took our time, walking through the crowds, who were lining the route, watching the Parade. Trade was slow but steady.

After about 3 miles we reached Sandy Row, we were already getting tired in the sweltering heat. However a brisk trade of 'The Flag' continued here for the next 4 hours, until the Parade made its way back again. It was here at Sandy Row, we discovered our best paper seller, a local lad called Deks. During the day, he alone sold over 100 copies of 'The Flag'!

When the last of the bands had marched by, we took stock of what we had sold. Over 350 copies of 'The Flag', plus we had handed out over a 1,000 leaflets and stickers, not too bad for a morning and afternoon. More importantly the NF had shown itself back in Belfast.

HOSPITALITY

So with the Parades over, it was back on the bus to Carrickfergus, but not for an early night. Our hosts, with other members of the local branch of the Protestant Unionist Association (PUA) had arranged a party for us. This party went on into the early hours and apart from being very enjoyable socially, it have us a chance to have a very fruitful talk with a number of major Loyalists there. The PUA is the party of the late George Seawright.

Finally on behalf of the NF members who made the trip from England, I would like to thank our hosts, John and Allan and their families. Also to Deks, Scotty, Jane and all other supporters of the PUA we met in Carrickfergus, for their hospitality, many thanks, see you next year!

FRONT WARNING COMING TRUE

JOBS ARE being lost already in Hull and Derby because of 1992.

Reckitt & Colman, the firm whose products include such household names as Brasso, Duraglit, Harpic, Steradent, Lemsip and Windolene are closing down factories in Britain and moving to France, Germany and Spain.

450 British jobs will be lost, nearly half the workforce, as Reckitt becomes one of the first major British companies to change its manufacturing arrangements in preparation for 1992. Others are certain to follow.

The National Front warned the British people that the Common Market and 1992 would mean that industry would be concentrated in the centre of Europe and that Britain would become a rural outpost beset by unemployment and over-run by Third World immigrants. Our grim warning is now, unfortunately, beginning to come true.

WORTH PONDERING

"A Man should, whatever happens, keep to his own caste, race and breed. Let the White go to the White and the Black to the Black - unless he wants a disaster".

Rudyard Kipling (1865-1936) 'Beyond The Pale'

Pots & Kettles

INFLATION IS theft. It strips the elderly of their life savings. It takes money from those who have earned it and gives it to those who haven't. Nobody could deny that fact yet there seems to be some disagreement as to who precisely is the thief.

Some would say the supermarket chains; those cut-throat competitors whose prices show an uncanny similarity and are regularly hoisted in unison. When their proffts increase by around 25% per year, one may reasonably question whether Britons are actually eating 25% more, even if some of them do look as though they had a spare meat pudding stuffed up their jumpers.

The brewers perhaps? Well they are operating such a blatant price cartel that even the Government was moved to threaten action; only to back off when it was realised how much the brewers, like the supermarket chains, contribute to Tory Party funds.

British companies in general are more profitable than ever before. The salaries of British company directors have risen by an average of 20% per year for the last three years. Lord King, Chairman of British Airways, not only was awarded a 116% pay increase by his stooges on the board but will enjoy a nice reduction in his rates under Thatcher's poll tax.

So who is the inflation thief? Well, John Murray, economics correspondent for the Sunday Telegraph has no doubt at all - it is the workers. Mr Murray, whose photograph reveals him to be a man who is unlikely to back away in horror from the port and pheasant, castigates the seamen for destroying our shipping industry by demanding decent wages instead of working cheap like Greeks and lascars. In tune with the Government, he denounces the railmen for their greed and selfishness in refusing to accept an effective wage cut in the middle of Madam Thatcher's white-hot economic revolution. Did you know that stationmen already have a basic rate as high as £103 per week? I bet Lord King is denouncing them too.

But perhaps Mr Murray is right when he castigates us all for paying ourselves more than we earn, even though we pay ourselves a good deal less than workers in most other industrialised countries. I would not, of course, be so uncouth as to enquire about how much money John Murray is paid as opposed to how much he is worth.

It is nice to know that the newspapers are in the van in the fight against inflation. In which case, why, when the official inflation rate is 8.3%, did the Sunday Telegraph recently raise its price by 11.8%?

Fat Boy Fandango

I DON'T know how many NF members take an interest in take-over bids; whether they know about them, or care about them, or would understand them if they did.

Nevertheless, they should be concerned about the latest breathtaking episode in the current bout of take-over mania that has all those honourable City gents licking their lips at the prospect of lots of lovely loot gleaned from thin air.

This multi-billion pound bid, for BAT Industries, has been made by a fabulously wealthy group composed of the knightly Sir James Goldsmith, who has fingers in more pies than Jack Horner; Australian entrepeneur and pioneer of floodlit pyjama cricket Kerry Packer; and Jacob Rothschild already. What brings this unlovely but strangely talented trio together is the prospect of money for nothing, for it is apparently nothing they are offering except their undoubted expertise at making money for nothing.

For what these gentlemen are offering "investors" for BAT shares is junk bonds; that is - IOU's that are not backed by any tangible assets but will hopefully be redeemed at a handsome profit when the victim is carved up in the knacker's yard.

Naturally, as befits a knight of the realm, Sir James Goldsmith's motives are of the highest calibre. BAT is a conglomerate and is the product of many take-overs; becoming a big fish by swallowing up lots of little fishes. Sir James claims that it is too big and inefficient and that he will break it up and liberate its assets with a handsome profit for all concerned - except, just possibly, for the hapless individuals who actually earn their living with BAT.

Whatever the fate of BAT, the implications for British industry of such activities are horrific. No company, however big and well established, is safe from the looters.

The poor performance of British industry is often rightly blamed on lack of investment. Yet, if a progressive company re-invests its profits instead of paying fat dividends to its shareholders, it runs the risk of its capital assets being worth considerably more than its quoted share value and becoming a prime target for loofers who would take it over and sell it up for scrap value.

So, in self-defence, companies distribute nearly all their profits in dividends and operate on borrowed money. Very nice too for the moneylenders.

So what is the Government's policy on takeovers? Why the Government has no policy. This is the land of anything goes and the essence of Thatcherism is that the weak and worthy but unwary will go to the wall and the fat boys shall inherit the earth. For that, of course, is the natural order of things in the looters' jungle.

O Joy

WE WERE all saddened and deeply hurt when Pakistan decided to leave the Commonwealth. What good news it is, then, that now Pakistan has restored to what passes for democracy in that part of the world, Benazir Bhutto, the new Prime Minister, has hinted that she might graciously consider rejoining this illustrious organisation that is the envy of the world and a real good laugh.

The benefits to Britain of such a move are incalculable. It would, of course, have the happy effect of reuniting the half of Pakistan living in Britain with the half that isn't - yet.

More British taxpayers' money will be needed to ensure that the fragile flower of democracy does not perish through lack of funds. Prince Charles will be able to drivel on about the dearth of Pakistanis in the Brigade of Guards and will have another place to visit in his asinine perambulations as the future head of an idiotic multi-racial menagerie.

Of course Pakistan does have a few problems which we will naturally be happy to share. As well as having murderous race riots every day of the week, she has a couple of million Afghan refugees parked on her territory who are not only a pesky nuisance but impose a considerable strain on the Pakistani economy.

No matter. I'm sure it's only a matter of time till some Tory twit declares that we "have an obligation of honour to our fellow subjects of the Queen" to relieve Pakistan of some of that burden.

Since we will no doubt be welcoming Vietnamese boat people and a million or two Hong Kong Chinese, why not some gun-toting Mujehaddin to add some real fizz to our multi-racial cocktail?

All it will need then is some ice. So far, entrenched racialist attitudes has severely restricted the influx of Eskimos.

I wonder if Greenland would consider joining the Commonwealth?

★★★★

Yet More Joy

DO YOU remember how relieved we all were when British Aerospace took over the Rover car company - once British Leyland, the ailing fag-end of a once great British engineering concern? At least, we thought, it will remain British.

True, the Government wrote off billions of company debt - taxpayers money, of course. True, the £150 million paid by BAe was ridiculously low and represented yet another Tory gift to big business - of taxpayers money. Still, it was so much better than letting foreigners get their hands on Rover, wasn't it?

Ah yes, so it was. Perhaps we should have feared the worst when the great Graham Day - fresh from his triumph of dismantling British Shipbuilders and sinking it without trace - was appointed as Chairman of Rover. Perhaps we should have remembered that BAe had conned the Government into handing over Royal Ordnance at a give-away price - about a tenth of the value of the land alone.

BAe were pretty sharp but they were British.

Now, alas, we hear that the British chaps of BAe have eased the Japanese car giant Honda still further into the British manufacturing scene by swopping 20% of Rover shares for a 20% stake in a new car plant that Honda is building in Swindon. This deal is estimated to be worth the equivalent of £70 million to BAe; quite a nice slice of what they paid for Rover in entirety.

With the Honda contribution, by 1992, 650,000 cars will be built by the Japs in Britain to invade the EEC and, incidentally, probably put Rover out of business.

It is hard to conceive of a British Government that could be so stupid, blind, or treacherous - or all three simultaneously - as to drive most of British manufacturing industry into the ground and then parcel up what's left and hand it to the Japs.

Still, the patriotic British Tory chaps in the City don't mind. They reckon that BAe have pulled off yet another smart stroke of business and they are hoping that Honda will take over Rover completely - BAe shares zooming as a result.

Sometimes I despair. But then that's what it's all about, isn't it - making the British despair as a prelude to being phased out of existence altogether?

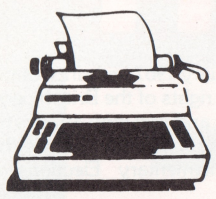
LETTERS



We Must Go Back to Freedom

Britain is seriously ill - dying. Her people have become obsessed with the plastic values of the permissive society. Television is brainwashing them into rejecting White racialism and supporting Black racialism.

In countless shops you can buy newspapers and magazines dedicated to the most vile pornography imaginable.

Our towns and cities have become the battlegrounds for gangs of spiritually lost teenagers - a manifestation of the junk food, drugs and violence culture which threatens the British way of life.

Our education system - once the envy of the world - has been polluted with the worst excess of anti-British thought. Patriotism has been dragged down and derided, sacrificed on the altar of Marxist ideology.

Children have become the mere products of the permissive society. Who can blame them if they grow up thinking that coloureds are no different to them, and that woodland is something that you cut down to make way for a supermarket or office block? Nature is alien to them.

Degeneracy, immigration, "new counties" (monsters such as Avon and Humberside), the Channel Tunnel, and the creation of the European Single Market are all part of a cold deeply calculated plan to transform our Nation.

In the face of all this adversity the National Front is a beacon of hope glittering in the dark. It gives patriots the courage to persevere, to fight for Britain and the British people.

In the words of G.K. Chesterton, as relevant today as they were when they were written 70 years ago, "We must go back to freedom or forward to slavery".

Improve Relations

With reference to the Annual Conference in the West Midlands in September, may I suggest that the National Front invites a guest speaker for the event.

Why not an Ulster politician or maybe an MEP from the Front Nationale or the German Republican Party.

After the recent Euro-elections I think it would be a great advantage to the party to improve relations with other European Nationalist political parties.

Not At Any Cost!

I was disappointed that there was no mention of the Leuchter Report in the July issue of 'The FLAG'; surely the publication that further exposes fundamental flaws in the alleged murder of six millions Jews by the Nazis is newsworthy.

The Leuchter Report is not some pro-Nazi whitewash it is just a scrupulous forensic examination of the alleged gas chambers at Auschwitz revealing that what are accepted as gas chambers today provide no scientific evidence to that fact.

I'm well aware of your editorial policy in 'The FLAG' to concentrate on the relevant political issues of the day and to 'leave history to the historians', but I believe in ignoring the Leuchter Report you are playing the establishment game and missing an opportunity to educate many new NF members who should be made aware of shades of opinion with regards to the events of the last war.

Let me too add my congratulations to John Daniels (FLAG No. 32) on the birth of his son, an incredible achievement for him - presumably Mrs Daniels had nothing to do with the happy event.

TREASON: Violation by a subject or subjects of their allegiance to sovereign or nation; betrayal; treachery; -Pocket Oxford Dictionary.

COUNCIL PUTS ASIANS FIRST!

WITH EAST LANCASHIRE towns sweltering like the rest of the country in this summer's heatwave, the closure of Marsden Park Swimming Pool in Nelson was a blow to the local youngsters and their parents.

Pendle Liberal Council has closed the pool to save £10,000 claiming it was a drain on resources.

To call the council's action treasonable would appear on the face of it an hysterical over-reaction. Surely careful house-keeping would be a better adjective with the council probably wanting to save the money from the swimming pool for more essential services, such as meals-on-wheels, or home help for Nelson's pensioners?

But of course no one can claim that it is good house-keeping for the council to give £200,000 in three years to an Asian Community centre that has never opened - and that is exactly what Pendle Council has done.

This year alone the Council has given £50,000 to the Ithaad Centre, enough to have kept Marsden Park Swimming Pool open for another five years!

The plain facts are that the needs of Nelson's White population have been ignored for the sake of £10,000, yet the apparent needs of Nelson's Asian community are being funded to the tune of £200,000.

There is barely a British family in Nelson that did not suffer a loss in Britain's two wars of this century. The mill towns of East Lancashire above all other British towns provided the cannon-fodder for the German guns in the 1914-18 war. Those fathers and sons died fighting to keep their country free - to give their grandchilden and great-grandchildren a country to be proud to live in.

What would those soldiers think now when they see recreational facilities for Nelson's British children sacrificed for the needs of coloured immigrants.

They probably would call it treason. The betrayal of all they died fighting for by a treacherous local council.

But it's not all doom and gloom in Nelson. From the ashes of despair the National Front pheonix has risen. For the first time ever, on Saturday July 1st local National Front members held a paper sale in the town and leafletted a local housing estate. The response was excellent with the news spreading like wildfire that the National Front was in town.

The success of the National Front's battle to win back Britain will depend on us winning the confidence of the British people in frontline towns like Nelson. It is in towns like these that the indigenous population, fed up with being second class citizens in their own country, will start electing National Front councillors to stand up for them and look after their needs.

MUSIC REVIEW With Bob Nash

THE RETURN OF THE REBEL

HEMEL HEMPSTEAD Pavilion saw the return of local favourites Steve Harley & Cockney Rebel on 20th June. The Monday night concert was the last date on a triumphant come back tour - the first dates that Harley had played for over eight years.

Cockney Rebel were the original line-up that had played on such classic albums as The Human Menagerie and The Psychomodo, excepting keyboard player Milton Reame-James and the 'no longer with us' bassist Paul Jeffreys, who Steve dedicated that night's version of Sebastian to.

The band's music was tight and professional as they played all their hits including Judy Teen, Mr Soft and Come up and See Me.

A varied selection from the band's albums was also played, notable points in the show being a jaunty version of Love's a Prima Donna and an eerie Why does the Sun Keep Shining. The electric violin of Jean-Paul Crocker and the keyboards of Steve's brother Richard, combined to weave the haunting sound that is so distinctive of the original Cockney Rebel.

Steve Harley himself was in fine voice, friendly and perfectly at ease with the audience as if he had never really been away from the Rock Scene.

The return of Cockney Rebel to the music scene is certainly a welcome one. With both a new single and album due for release this month, the band's form of romantic style Rock seems poised to light up the British charts once more. Welcome the Rebel's return,

ROOTING FOR $5 MILLION

BLACK AUTHOR Alex Haley is soon to face the prospect of a major court case over his best-selling book Roots.

The book claimed to trace the history of Haley's family from his African ancestor, Kunte Kinte, but the author has been accused by Emma Paul of lifting names, descriptions and events from her own book The Bold Truth, which covers her own life as a black women living in the Deep South during the 1930s to 1970s.

She is at present pressing Haley for a $5 million settlement.

Isn't it fascinating to get to the root of the matter.

FLAG SPORT

Charity Begins At Home Clive

• Clive Lloyd

WEST INDIAN cricketer, Clive Lloyd has been appointed by the Home Secretary as a member of the Commission for Racial Equality.

COMMITTED

His main job will be in the field of ethnic broadcasting seeing that minorities in Britain get all they require from their local radio stations.

Clive Lloyd, however is still heavily committed to West Indian cricket and will be given special leave of absence when the West Indies are involved in Test Matches.

IMPROVE

If Clive Lloyd cares about West Indian cricket he should be living in the West Indies. If he really cares about West Indian people he should, again, be living in his own country doing his best to improve their standard of living, not drawing a fat salary and living in Cheshire while paying lip service to community relations.

• What a Dick! - Sports Minister Colin Moynihan being taken for a ride.

Red Card For Colin Moynihan!

COLIN MOYNIHAN SHOULD be sacked. As Minister of Sport he has been an absolute disaster. Colin Moynihan should be looking after the needs of the millions of Britons who watch and/or take part in sport - instead he is doing the exact opposite.

His ID scheme, his support for the ban on English soccer clubs in Europe and his continual interference in the affair of sporting links with South Africa are all having an adverse effect on British sport.

★ The identity card scheme penalises the law-abiding, dedicated football supporter and will not deter the tiny mindless minority of soccer thugs who are degrading the game. The only way to tackle football hooliganism is to increase police surveillance to catch the thugs and then give them a punishment that will make sure they never offend again.

★ Weekend after weekend across Europe violence flares up at football matches, unfortunately it is a sickness of our times. The violence is worse than any seen in Britain yet Moynihan still continues to want to persecute Britain and British football by insisting that our football violence is so bad that British clubs must not be allowed to play in Europe. What a Judas to have as Minister of Sport.

Moynihan's latest anti-British move to introduce a two-year ban on football supporters who make derogatory remarks about West Indian footballers. It appears that racist chanting is a more serious crime in Moynihan's book than mindless thuggery. (Well what do you expect from someone duped by Asian tartlet Pamela Bordes!).

Is it any wonder that Britain faces humiliation after humiliation in the world's sporting arenas when we have a Minister of Sport like Moynihan?

NF Leaflet Nets The Fans At Wimbledon

THE PASTY-faced unwashed brigade of interfering lefties had a nasty shock when they turned up at the final day of the Wimbledon tennis championships - because members of the National Front were waiting for them.

The Reds claimed to be the 'National Union of Miners of South Africa Campaign Support Network' and were handing out their usual tatty leaflets, but they rapidly discovered that most members of the public were more interested in the leaflets headed 'Freedom in Sport' being handed out by the National Front.

Totally intimidated the Anti-Apartheid group quickly gave up their leaflet distribution and huddled together on a patch of grass well away from the main entrances, while in the space of an hour the NF gave hundreds of leaflets to those attending the championships.

What a shame that all the British competitors had been eliminated during the first week of the competition and so British tennis fans were reduced to cheering for Americans and Germans.

PRINCE WINS AT 20-1

MONEY, MONEY, money is what FLAG punters have got this month after Mogul Prince won the 5.15pm race at Newmarket on Saturday 22nd July at 20-1. He was one of the three racing selections given by our tipster for July, the others being Duckington (Won 2-1, and 2nd 11-2) and Princess Wu (3rd 13-2).

Mogul Prince came from Mark Usher's Lambourn stable and his string also provides one of our tips for August.

Chloe's Pet ran a stinker at Thirsk on Friday 28th July but that's not its real form. Our man on the gallops confidently predicts Chloe's Pet will win 'a mile seller' before the end of August.

Other selections this month are African Affair (1 mile 5 furlong seller) and the highly thought of Arundel 2 year-old from John Dunlop's stable Storm Jib.

• Scene from 'The Manageress'.

The Courage to go Back Home!

VIEWERS DIDN'T have to wait long for Channel 4's series The Manageress to contain a political message.

It was the usual 'bash the football supporters who want their teams to remain White' - smearing them as mindless thugs who care little for their team. The programme smeared the National Front and portrayed West Indian footballers as men of courage who would overcome all adversity so that they could play football.

Stirring stuff, but of course all fantasy. If West Indians had the courage of their convictions they would be packing their bags for the West Indies to play football in front of their own people who would give them the respect they no doubt deserve.

Find The Artist Plea!

READERS ~~can you~~ help? In last month's issue we told you of the 'United Against Racism' campaign launched by Manchester United to stamp out racist chants at Old Trafford.

We told you about a competition amongst school children to design a poster depicting multi-racial bliss in football. Well tragedy befell the winning entrant. The perfect picture has been found but the artist forgot to give his name and address.

There's United's goalkeeper Jim Leighton eager to save penalties from the budding Rembrandt whose picture showed blacks and white living together in harmony, but the artist is nowhere to be found.

Distraught Community Relations officer, Peter Eldon, made an impassioned plea for the artist to come forward and reacted angrily to a rumour that the picture was the only one entered in the competition, describing the suggestion as 'blatant National Front propaganda'.

• Peter Eldon with an entry for the United Against Racism Competition. But was it the only entry?

THE NATIONAL FRONT

A political party that stands up for Britain and the British people.

The National Front was formed on 7th February 1967 and since that day has campaigned continuously to defend the rights of the British people. Despite many ups and downs in its fortunes and non-stop attacks from our opponents, the National Front today still stands firm behind those beliefs, contesting, Euro-Elections, Parliamentary Elections and Council Elections whenever it can.

DEMOCRACY & INDIVIDUAL FREEDOM

The National Front is committed to the preservation and enhancement of Parliamentary democracy. We are committed to the defence of traditional British rights of freedom of speech and opinion for our opponents as well as ourselves. The National Front would enshrine rights of free speech and free expression of opinion in a Bill of Rights.

RACE, NATIONALITY & CITIZENSHIP

The National Front believes in a positive creed of love of Nation and Race, not of negative hatred of coloured immigrants as individuals. We are committed to the ending of all non-White immigration and to the phased, humane and financially-assisted repatriation of all non-Whites resident on our national territory.

NATIONAL SOVEREIGNTY

The National Front is committed to Britain becoming a fully sovereign nation as far as possible independent externally of other nations and internally of sectional interests.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Northern Ireland is, and must always remain an integral part of the British Nation. Those people currently resident in Northern Ireland who refuse to renounce allegiance to an independent Irish state and therefore do not consider themselves British will lose their British Citizenship and, as a result, their automatic right to live on British soil, vote in British elections and enjoy British social services. This would enable all IRA activists and supporters to be removed permanently from the UK.

DEFENCE

The National Front is resolved that Britain must possess an independent nuclear deterrent, one entirely produced, maintained and controlled from within Britain. Our conventional armed forces must be expanded and modernised. All foreign bases would be removed from British soil.

OWNERSHIP OF INDUSTRY

The National Front believes in the widespread private ownership of industry commerce and agriculture. We envisage an economy comprised of small and medium-sized businesses and farms owned by individuals and partnerships; enterprises that are necessarily large which are owned and controlled by employee shareholders, and producers' co-operatives in which the profits would be distributed among the employees. Nationalised industries would exist in those areas of the economy in which the necessary monopoly position, level of fixed costs or importance to national security or the economy, made public ownership necessary or desirable.

CRIME & POLICING

We recognise that crime can only be contained by providing adequate deterrents, rather than searching for alleged 'social causes'. Therefore we would restore capital punishment for the categories of murder, treason, large-scale drug trafficking and involvement in terrorist offences.

HEALTH & WELFARE

The National Front recognises that the State has an obligation to ensure that those of its nationals who cannot be expected to support themselves should enjoy a standard of living that is adequate to cover their reasonable material and social needs. We believe that the National Health Service must be maintained at whatever level is necessary to ensure the health and well-being of the Nation.

EDUCATION

The National Front believes that there must be a national common core curriculum in primary eductaion to ensure that the minimum standards of literacy and numeracy are achieved by all children. Secondary education must place a strong emphasis on technology and craftsmanship.

THE ENVIRONMENT

The defence of the environment is central to the National Front's programme for National and Racial survival. We seek an economy and a way of life which will respect and sustain the environment rather than disregarding and exploiting it.

If you agree with National Front thinking on these issues of the day then join our Party and take your place alongside other Britons who have joined our crusade to win back our country!
